On Saturday February 18 2006, ten members of the Conception Bay South Fire Department spent the day at the firefighter training facility of the Offshore Safety and Survival Centre in Foxtrap to be tested for NFPA 1001 Firefighter certification. To receive NFPA 1001 Certification, firefighters must undergo a full day of rigorous testing in all aspects of Structural Firefighting. Firefighters who successfully complete this testing will earn their NFPA 1001 Firefighter Level 1 certificate, which is recognized internationally throughout the fire service.
